

Teaching and Learning

Conversations at Allen Consolidated Schools revolve around GROWTH. We want our students to grow from one benchmark to another. Teachers use data to influence the way and what they teach so that students grow. Schedules are established so that students can take more offerings and college credit classes so that they can grow. Staff members take students where they are at, a preschool student learning to read and write all the way to seniors graduating with 36 credit hours from local colleges, and they encourage and teach students toward growth.
